

Cooking Your HOLIDAY MEAL

consumerbrief

The holiday season brings families together around the table, sharing good times and great food. But holiday joy can turn to sadness if a loved one becomes ill from undercooked poultry. Whatever you bake, braise, boil, fry or fricassee, whether it's turkey, duck, chicken, hen or goose, make sure you cook it long enough to kill all harmful bacteria.

STORING AND THAWING YOUR BIRD

- Frozen poultry should stay in the freezer until you are ready to cook it.
- To prevent bacteria from spreading, always keep your hands clean and use hot, soapy water to wash everything that comes in contact with raw meat.
- Fresh poultry can be kept in the refrigerator for up to two days.
- Keep the bird in its original wrapper until you are ready to prepare it.

THERE ARE THREE WAYS TO SAFELY THAW FROZEN POULTRY:

Refrigerator Method

If you have enough time, defrost the bird in the refrigerator. It defrosts at a rate of five pounds per day. Place the bird on a dish so the juices don't drip in the refrigerator or contaminate other food.

Cold Water Method

If you don't have enough time to thaw your bird in the refrigerator, place the wrapped bird, in the sink, covered with cold water. The water should be changed every half hour. The bird will thaw at two pounds per hour.

Microwave Method

If time is very limited, microwave your bird. Check the manufacturer's instructions for the size bird that will fit in your microwave, the minutes per pound, and the power level. Remove the wrapping as soon as it becomes loose. Cook the bird immediately after thawing.

PREPARING AND STUFFING

After the bird has thawed, remove the neck and giblets and thoroughly wash the inside and outside of the bird with cold water. Drain and pat dry with paper towels. If you are cooking the stuffing inside the bird, put it in the bird just before it goes into the oven. Stuff it loosely so the stuffing will heat to a safe temperature. When the bird is done, take the stuffing out immediately. Set the oven no lower than 325 degrees.

WHEN IS THE BIRD DONE?

Turkey breast should reach 170 degrees. If you are cooking a whole turkey, the dark meat should reach 180 degrees, and stuffing should reach 165 degrees. The juices should also run clear. If they are pink, the bird is not done. Some birds have a pop-up timer, but they can either pop prematurely or not pop at all.

STORING LEFTOVERS SAFELY

Refrigerate or freeze any leftovers within two hours of taking them out of the oven.

Refrigerated stuffing and poultry should be used within three to four days and the gravy should be used within two days.

HOW TO PREVENT FOOD POISONING

- Keep a neat, clean kitchen. Wash your hands in warm soapy water before handling food.
- Cook food thoroughly until it's done.
- Even during a meal, food should never stay out of the refrigerator more than two hours.
- Refrigerate leftovers as soon as a meal is over.
- When you go grocery shopping, go home immediately, and put food like meat, milk, eggs and other perishables in the refrigerator.

KEEP YOUR FAMILY HEALTHY.

KNOW HOW LONG FOOD WILL LAST.

IN THE FREEZER

pork roast.....	4-8 months
steak.....	6-12 months
beef roast.....	6-12 months
whole chicken	12 months
hamburger.....	3-4 months
TV dinners.....	expiration date
corn.....	8 months
meat & vegetable casserole	2-3 months

IN THE REFRIGERATOR

milk.....	expiration date
eggs.....	expiration date
butter.....	expiration date
fresh hamburger	1-2 days
chicken parts	1-2 days
bacon	one week
sour cream.....	2-4 weeks
deli lunch meat, unopened	2 weeks
deli lunch meat, opened	1 week
whipped cream/custard pies.....	2-3 days
fish fresh.....	1-2 days
cooked meat and vegetable casserole ...	3-4 days

Watch the date on the package! If there is a "use-by" date on the container, follow it. Otherwise, use these storage times.

Keep the door shut so the refrigerator can keep everything cold. Defrost the refrigerator if ice builds up.

Have a happy holiday and remember to make sure your goose is cooked!
